TO PROFESSIONAL WALL STREET:

All of which is prelude to this advice bit: Buy them all day long today in chunks limited only by your margin. Don't dilly-dally about what you will buy or what you will pay. Buy anything, but buy today, for the day after tomorrow will be too late.

TO PROFESSIONAL WALL STREET:

With the Rostrum, the Street and the Press charged to suffocation with hot air, with the Nation's atmosphere glutinous with buncombe, with "Wilson's a trickster," "Hughes a sneak" the only slogans, with Teddy shadow-shuddering the voters and with George Perkins red-herring-tailing the sun, moon and stars into get-to-cover-quick Jack-o'-lanterns, it is up to someone to flag the Street's running wild mental motor to the fact that day after tomorrow Horse Sense, Common and Preferred, will be up over par again. So here goes:

TO PROFESSIONAL WALL STREET:

It matters not who wins, Wilson or Hughes. In past elections the little people of Stockdom have had no show. Only market-makers knew before Election what Stockgambledom was going to do after Election. The hopper was rigged to a harvest slant. If Election was to be "good," they set the nets three weeks before Election; if "bad," their traps two months before.

TO PROFESSIONAL WALL STREET:

But this 1916 Election—well, it is ordained that this war election year is for the lambs.
